The Cult of Dionysus

Inspiration and Thought

Rocky Horror Picture Show

Rocky Horror is a sex filled cult classic film, centered around the 'other', and their alienation, quite litterally. The film is a blend of genres created by Richard o'brien from his love of b-horror, originally a on stage musical the script was adapted for the screen and flopped, through the midnight cinema route it found it's audience, those who too didn't fit in. The film stands as the longest running theatrical release continuing to inspire audiences to be themselves, no matter how alien it is.

The Cult Of Dionysus

Excessive drinking and debauchery generally accompanied the cult of Dionysus, giving rise to the word 'bacchanalia' for a party featuring drunken revelry. Initially Dionysus was often portrayed as a dignified, elderly man with a beard, and later as a beautiful, nude youth or as a small, fat man. A barrel of wine, a bunch of grapes in his hand or a wreath of vines crowning his head are rarely missing in these depictions.

Boudoir Photography

Boudoir photography is a form of professional photography that is intimate, flattering the curves and beauty of the client's body. Boudoir, which is French for a woman's private dressing room, inspires the intimacy of this genre of photography.

Peter Hujar

Peter Hujar was an American Photographer most activer during the 70s and 80s, dying in 1987 due to AIDS related issues. During his life time he did not recieve a lot of recognition and stuck mostly to the downtown New York scene, but post mortem his work most popularly can be seen as the book cover to "A little Life", by Hanya Yanagihara.

Peter Hujar's photography puts an emphasis on the subject face, their pain and pleasure and their actions. I want to capture the same emotion that his photo does. Quite often features or positions appear to be warped and staged. A majority of Hujar's work examined male sexuality and themes of death and life.

Fiona Clark

Fiona Clark is a New Zealand photographer most active during the 70s and 80s. A majority of her photo depict the underground drag scene, as well as body builders. She recieved backlash during these times and galleries refused to show her work due to it subject matter.

I love the way Clark is able to capture the model in their most confident, none of her photos depict anything but confidence which seems to ooze from the model. A lot of her framing to me is disinteresting when solo models, but her ability to capture multiple people and show more personality interests me, though I will be shoot a single model.

I Would Like, If I May, to Take You on a Strange Journey

Is interesting, but not showing the model outside of the reflection makes the image unclear

Myself and the door in the background are too distracting

I want the model to be looking at herself or the camera in the shot

The expersion in the mirror looks to murderous for the message wanted

Was unsure how to edit this, the model face wasn't visable but the framing was interesting

The non reflected image looks to engry for the first image which i wanted to depict more confusion than anything

I wanted for my first photo to show the models face in full, the least distorted it would be in the whole collection, clean from makeup, and in full sight of the camera. I edited together two final photos to create this efect

The model looks as if she is going to laugh which isn't the image I want to capture.

The grapes are out of focus, and too much of the models face is visable

The models body looks to uncomfortable and squashed to their chest, the shadows too arent long enough.

Models chin is too visable, the shadow is uninteresting and short loosing detail of the image, the grapes are also shadowed on the arm rather than the wall behind.

For this photo I wanted to cover the models face but play on the sterotypical image of luxury of the person being feed grapes.

Model is too far from the camera, the lighting is good but not dramatic enough

Very similair to the final choice, blanket is visable, the lips a little too closed.

Odd posture, weird framing, blanket is visable

Good framing, odd lighting, Blanket is visable

The final image the model looks comfortable in her role, the shadow shields her face a bit from the viewer as to force focus on her neck where the lipstick mark is visable.

I didn't like the framing, the models face is too visable and shes looking at an odd place.

The model appears to be laughing, and there is very little visable juice on her shirt

The final photo the stain is the most visable, and their is a distinct shine of liquid on the models lips

Theres not enough visable liquid on the models shirt, and her face is devoid of the juice too, looking like shes drinking apropreiatly verus the over indulgence I want.

Her face looks disinteresting , theres no juice dripping from the bottle but her shirt is stained.

Interesting, disrupts the series of images, was second choice however I didn't want this photo to be the one to look the closest at the camera, Lens is hoffed up by steam

Model is looking too far away from the camera, framing is good but shadow isn't bold enough

The angle of the face is interesting but the shadow is boring in comparison, the look isn't bold enough.

Sweet not dramatic enough to fit theme, feels lonely but comfortable which isn't the emotion I aimed to invoke.

The model looks moody, the eyeliner is extenuated by the black and white filter, her body looks relaxed but her face tell a different disinterested, or angry story.
