
time moves fast
Campbell smith

“Life moves pretty fast. If you don't stop and look around once in a while, you could miss it.”

Ferris Bueller's Day Off

For 'What is Time', I wanted to look at my relationship with time. Like most people I feel as though I busy myself with distractions and don't live life in the moment, leaving me with a feeling of wasting time, I tried to capture this wasting of time but fell short, after the first photoshoot I realized the photos I loved were the ones I had taken in the moment using my friends as models and guides for how I was going to frame myself. I still wasn't so sold on the change but a rewatch of one of my favourite John Hugh's films solidified it, and my photos meaning became living in the moment, and capturing it. Because we will never be here again.

Stylistic Choices

Film,
I enjoy the aesthetic of film, and its principal, but due to the cost of the film itself, as well as processing the medium itself is a inexcessable goal, to still get the desired film-like look I plan on editing my photos to adjust the highlights, and darken the shadows.

The principal of film photography to me, specifically instant film, is capturing a moment without thought for lighting, positioning etc, for the photo to be taken and just exist in the moment it was taken.

Cinematic,
One of my favourite styles of film are movies where nothing happens, or films that simply exist in a single moment in time, typically with little to no plot. As a source of stylistic inspiration I plan on looking at film-stills in these movies, and how they create this warm atmosphere around them.

I think these types of films theme of nothing happening, matches my own.

My Pintrest Board -https://pin.it/3zSAXf6

Anderson. W. (2021) The French Dispatch. [Film-Still]

Anderson. W. (2021) The French Dispatch. [Film-Still]

Anderson. W. (2012) Moonrise Kingdom. [Film-Still]

Anderson. W. (2001) The Royal Tenenbaums. [Film-Still]

Wes Anderson + Robert Yeoman

Wes Anderson's films and style can be easily described as 'Realistic things, shot unrealistically'. Anderson's films, thanks to his collaboration with Cinematographer Robert Yeoman, all have a set color pallette they adhear to and follow a lot of symetry to keep the audience focused.

For my own work I want to see how I can alter the realism of candid everyday photography and make it feel unrealistic, and boaderline staged.

Mario NR

Mario NR. (2014) Time Passes Slowly. [Photograph]

Mario NR. (2011) The Stock Market. [Photograph]

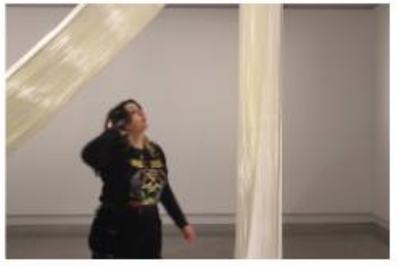

Mario is a candid photographer I found through an article, I tried and failed to find the man behind the photos, however his candid photography struck a cord in me.

Shooting subjects in his surrounding city is work shows a lot of contrast of characters in them, all the people in his photos seem to show off their personality, as if just from the photo you could tell who they are.

This gave me a idea, that all my photos had to show something of these people not visible all the time to everyone, a moment in which they exhale.

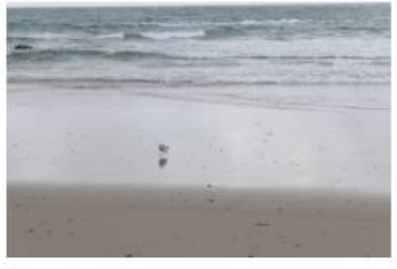

Test Shots

Seale. J. (Cinematographer) (1989) Dead Poets Society [Film-Still]

Levy. S. (Cinematographer) (2017) LadyBird [Film-Still]

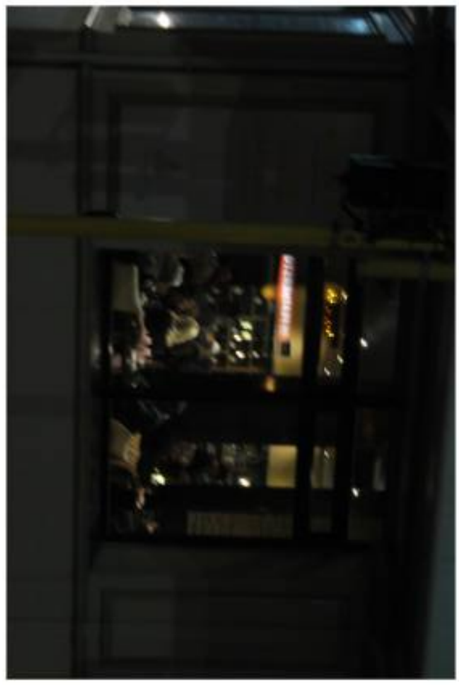

Cianchetti. F. (Cinematographer) (2003) The Dreamers [Film-Still]

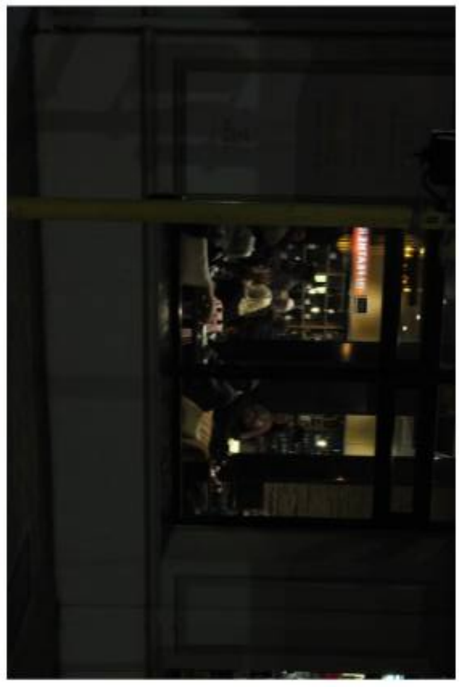

Fujimoto. T. (Cinematographer) (1986) Ferris Bueler's Day Off [Film-Still]

Too Blurry, framing is odd.

f/5.6
1/80
ISO-3200

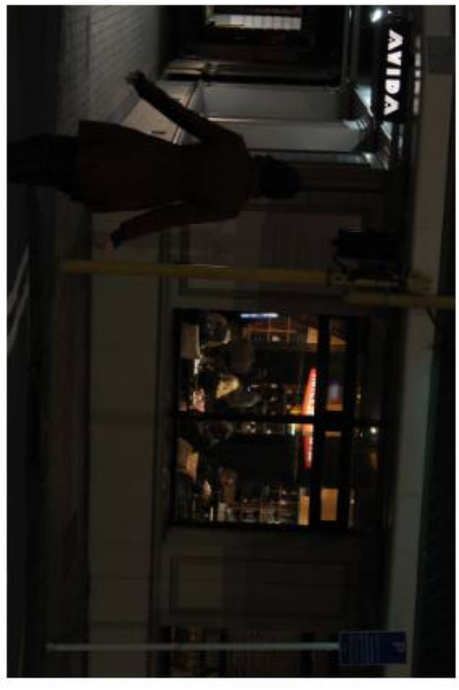

Framing cuts out top of the window.

f/5.6
1/80
ISO-3200

Figure is dis-interesting and blends in too much.

f//5.6
1/80
ISO-3200

Figure's shape is bolder, framing of the man in the window is better.

f/5.6
1/3200
ISO-3200

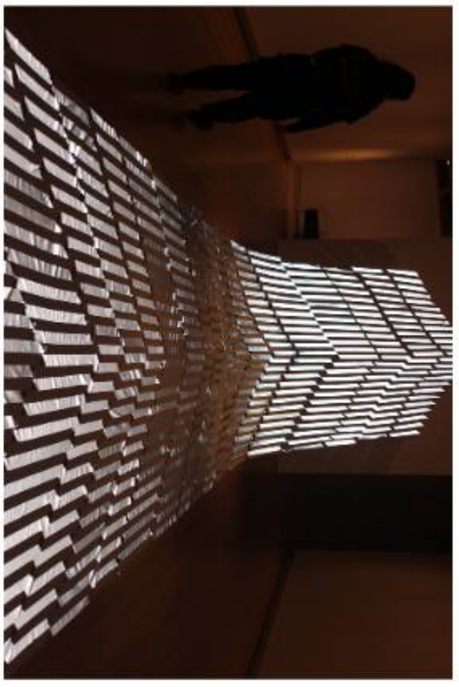

Felt too staged, Didn't like the akward positioning of the model

f/4
1/60
ISO-400
Flash

Felt too staged

f/4 1/60
ISO-400
Flash

Framing Shot, Not as interesting without subject

f/4.5
1/60
ISO-400
Flash

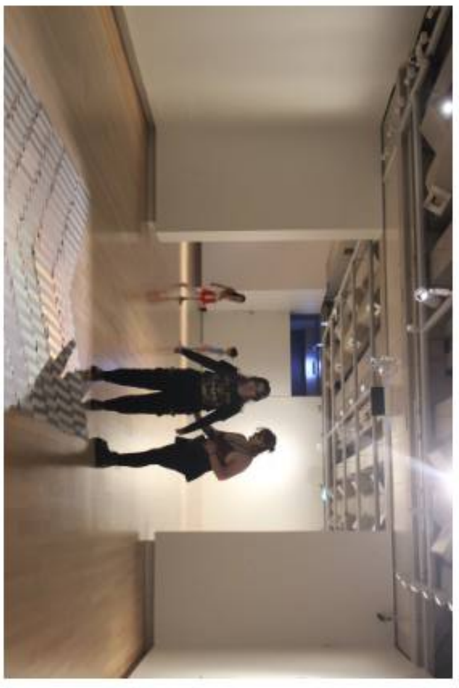

Final image, models are relaxed not noticing the camera

f/4
1/60
ISO-400
Flash

Not candid, models noticed the camera

f/4.5
1/60
ISO-400
Flash

Didn't capture the reflective nature of the Tapa

f/4
1/400
ISO-400

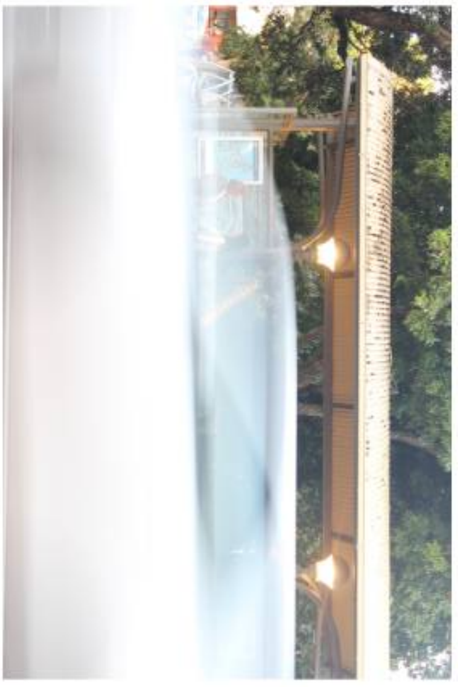

Car covers models entirely, over exposed

f/5
1/5
ISO-100

Models are looking at camera, there's no motion

f/5
1/400
ISO-800

Car covers too much

f/5
1/5
ISO-100

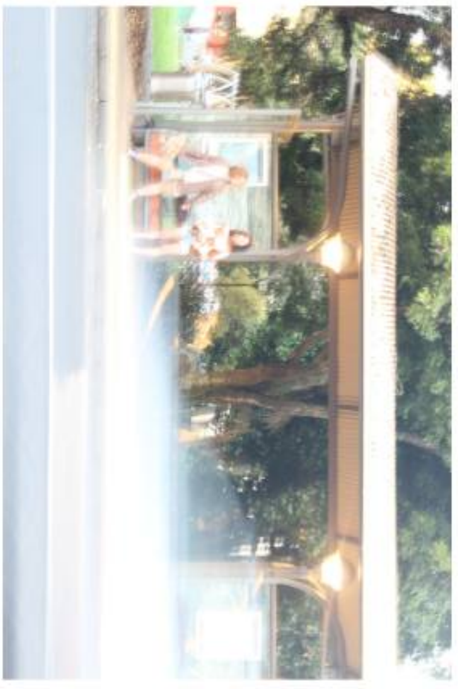

Final choice, still over exposed, but able to be fixed in editing

f/5
1/5
ISO-100

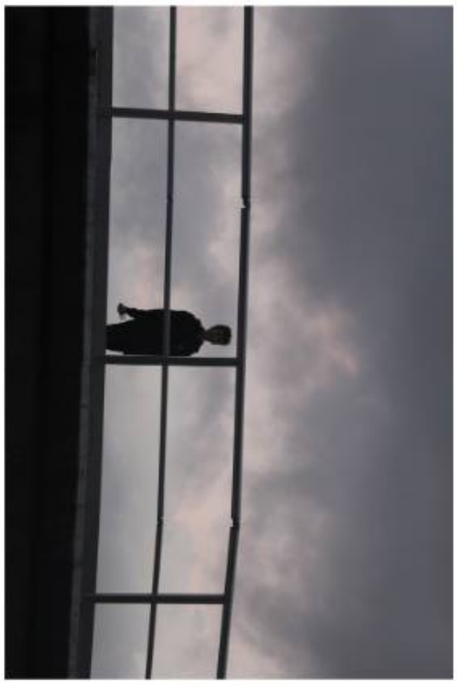

Framing everything is fine, but no motion

f/5
1/400
ISO-800

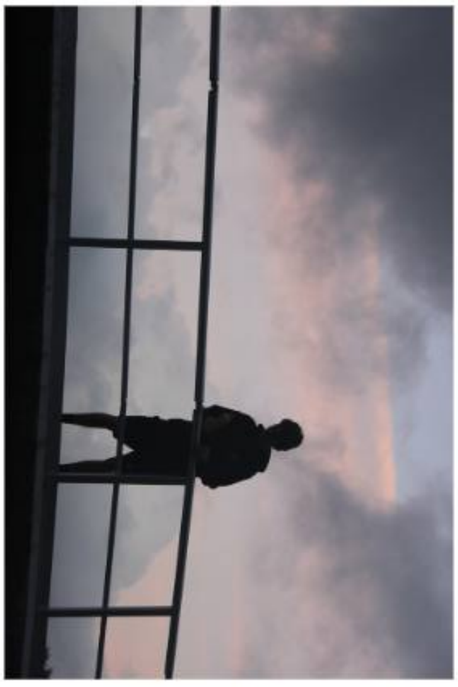

Over exposed and models are in a position that's not interesting

f/5
1/5
ISO-100

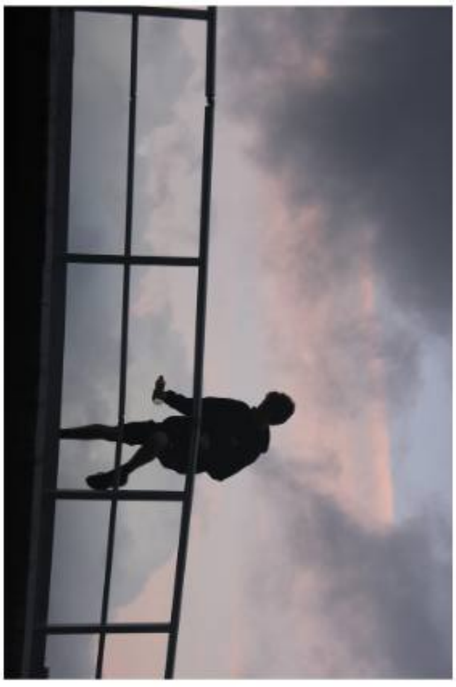

Model is too far away

f/5.6
1/160
ISO-1000

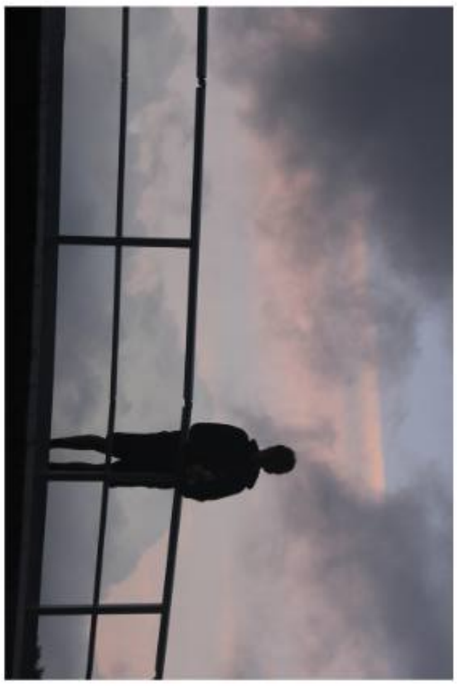

Positioning of model looks odd

f/6.3
1/160
ISO-640

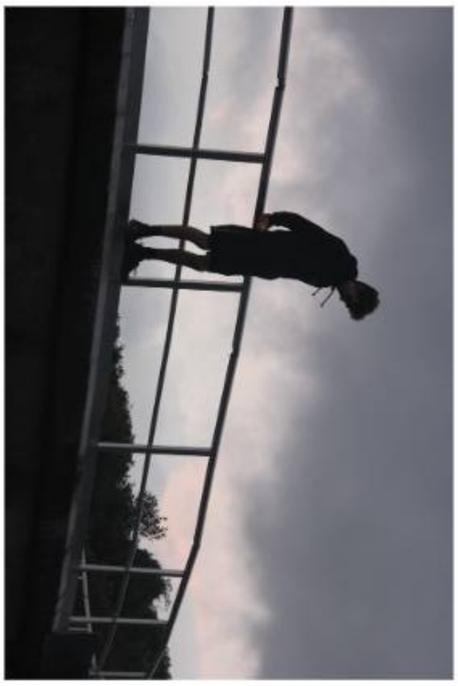

Non disernable shape

f/6.3
1/160
ISO-640

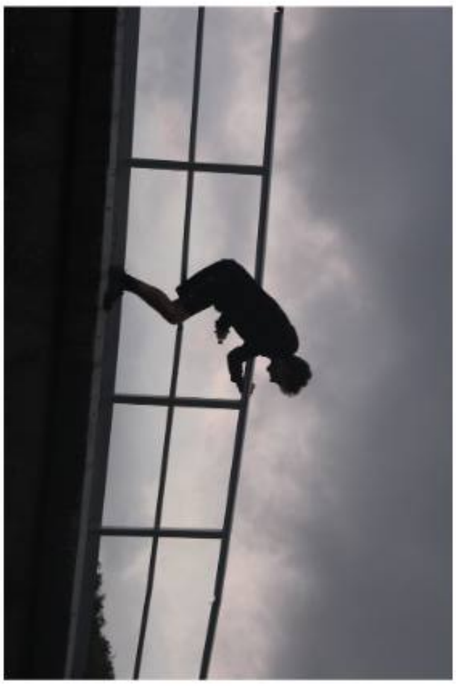

Final choice, strong shape of model, color in the sky adds interest.

f/5.6
1/160
ISO-500

Second choice, positioning shows intent to move, sky's colour is too dull

f/6.3
1/160
ISO-1600

Odd Positioning, the sky's color doesn't come through

f/5.6
1/160
ISO-1250

Too dark, out of focus, positioning is interesting

f/5
1/20
ISO-3200

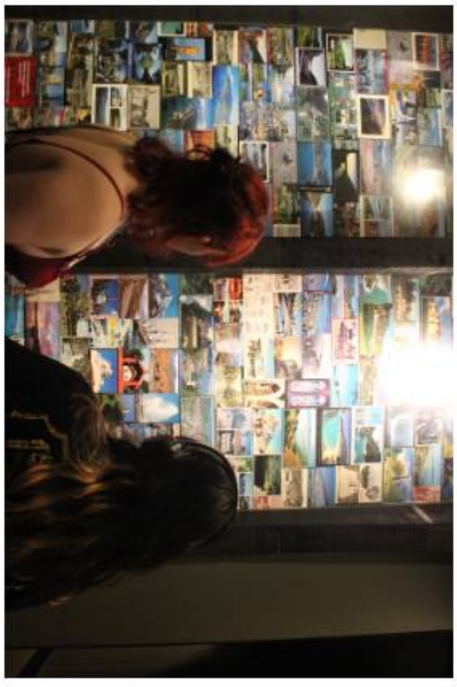

Too much blur, Confusing image

f/5
1/8
ISO-3200

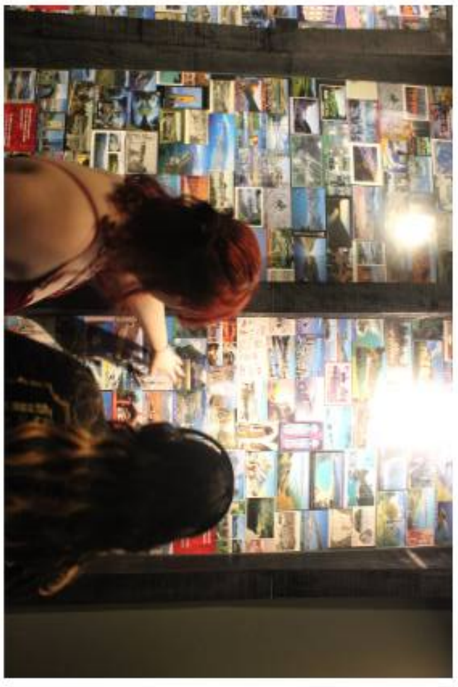

Too much blur, Other model's arm is blurry and in frame

f/5
1/8
ISO-3200

Final choice, positioning is interesting and focuses on the map

f/9
1/15
ISO-3200

Positioning is strongest, second choice, the glare on the map is too strong

f/9
1/13
ISO-3200

Slightly lighter, slightly less blurry

f/5
1/20
ISO-3200

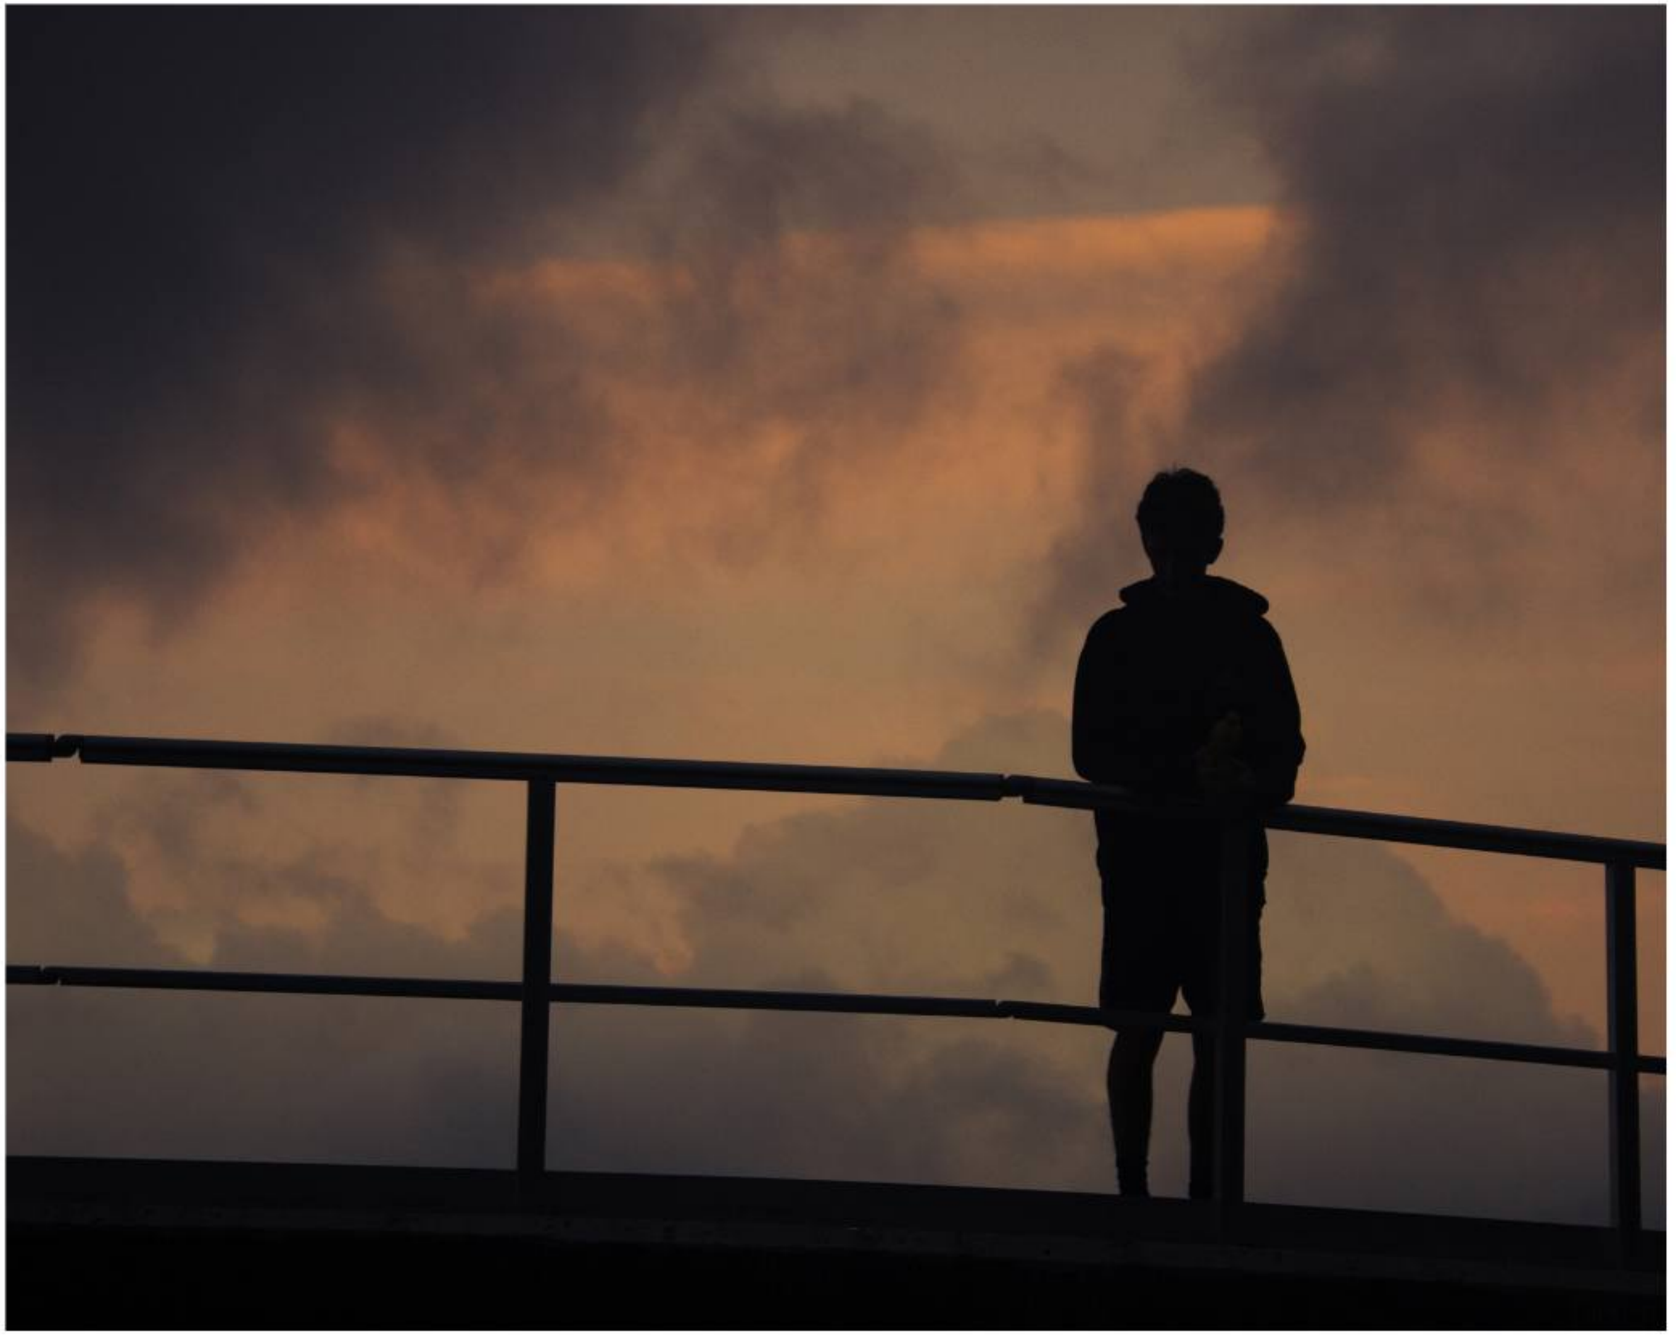

dinner out

time together

catch up

pause

home at our finger tips

VIDA

